

BEFORE WE HAD FACES

Sometimes the face you trust is not the person you know.

Good coffee
Better conversations
♡

THE DAILY BEAN
LATE & MORE
Latte	120
Cold Coffee	150
Brownie	110
Total	380
See you again? ♡

Same faces.
Different lives.

Aaruhi Sharma • Vihaan Arora

A story of friendship, secrets, identity & second chances.

BEFORE WE HAD FACES

A story of friendship, secrets, identity &
second chances

Aaruhi Sharma • Vihaan Arora

A book-style promotional edition

Chapter One

First Impressions

The school corridor was loud enough to hide almost anything: unfinished conversations, nervous glances and secrets people carried without realizing they were showing them.

Ayan: "You know, for someone who claims she doesn't care about attention, you get noticed a lot."

Aaruhi: "That's because people have terrible hobbies."

Mehar: "Or because you make it impossible to ignore you."

Aaruhi: "Same difference."

Vihaan: "So you're Aaruhi."

Aaruhi: "And you're supposed to be...?"

Vihaan: "Someone you were probably going to meet eventually."

Aaruhi: "Confident answer."

Vihaan: "I prefer prepared."

Aaruhi: "We'll see."

It was a small exchange. Neither of them knew yet how much it would matter.

Chapter Two

Coffee, Chaos & A Bill

The café was supposed to be a break from school. Instead, it became another place where personalities collided.

Waiter: "What would you like?"

Aaruhi: "Coffee. And something sweet. I need compensation for this morning."

Ayan: "I'll take that as a personal attack on the morning."

Aaruhi: "Take it however you want."

Ayan: "Wait. You're telling me this is the bill?"

Aaruhi: "You ordered half the menu."

Ayan: "I was hungry."

Aaruhi: "Then be hungry with a budget next time."

Vihaan: "You two always argue like this?"

Ayan: "No. Sometimes we argue worse."

Aaruhi: "Don't encourage him."

For a moment, everything felt ordinary. That was the dangerous part.

Chapter Three

The Question Behind the Smile

Aaruhi began noticing details she couldn't explain. Vihaan seemed to know things before she said them. Small moments that once felt random started forming a pattern.

Aaruhi: "Why do I get the feeling you already knew about me?"

Vihaan: "Maybe you're easier to notice than you think."

Aaruhi: "That's not an answer."

Vihaan: "Maybe I didn't say it was."

Ayan: "Okay... this conversation just became interesting."

Aaruhi: "Ayan, don't."

Ayan: "I'm not doing anything."

Aaruhi: "That's exactly what worries me."

Everyone had a version of themselves they showed the world. The question was how many versions existed underneath.

THE STORY CONTINUES...

Sometimes you know someone's name, their smile, their favourite coffee—and still don't know their face.

ATERUS

Book-style promotional draft • Dialogue improvised from the story pages shared in chat.